Study Description

In response to the influx of proposals for planned communities and future development in the Northwest Foothills, ACHD has initiated a study to analyze future impacts to the regional transportation system.

This study will:

- Analyze potential impacts of development on existing & future transportation system
- Predict traffic conditions & identify future transportation needs
- Identify a future road network
- Establish policies for improving the transportation system when development occurs

This study will not:

- Justify land use plans
- Endorse development or provide approval for future development
